1974 PONTIAC AIR CONDITIONING

The fully-integrated design of every Pontiac air-conditioning unit features several carefully-positioned, adjustable outlets to provide a full and even flow of cool, dry air throughout the car. Shown here is the Automatic Temperature Control Air Conditioning on the Grand Ville. Units on other models are similar, although instrument panel designs and air-conditioning controls may vary slightly.

Individual vents can be manually controlled to direct the flow of air. Upper vents can direct cool air up or down and to right or left (or directly forward). Lower vents can direct the flow up or down. Any vent can be closed completely, if desired.

Note: Your Pontiac salesman would be pleased to show you in more detail how to operate your air conditioning for greater versatility. Your Owner's Manual will provide additional, specific details for future reference.

Air conditioning means more than coolness during hot weather—although it would be worth it for that benefit alone. Consider these additional benefits. The quiet of closed-window driving. No buffeting from the wind at cruising speeds. The absence of aggravating dust, pollen or humidity. Dry and wrinkle-free clothes. Grooming that stays neat. More comfort for children. Higher resale value.

When you order air conditioning for your new Pontiac, you'll receive: a special suspension; high-capacity radiator, alternator and battery; thermostatically-controlled, seven-blade fan; larger, higher capacity tires on many models; and a special rear-axle ratio in many cases.

In short, the time to consider air conditioning is when you order your new Pontiac! And air conditioning certainly is one of the accessories you should consider for your new Pontiac.

Automatic Temperature Control Air Conditioning (Code 581—UPC C61). Set the automatic temperature control and forget it—heats in the winter, cools in the summer. Available on Grand Am, Catalina, Catalina Safari, Bonneville, Grand Ville, Grand Safari and Grand Prix. (F)
